Update on the Bremerton MGP Waste Release:

I met with AnchorQEA, Aspect Consulting and USCG PST on site today around noon and we discussed their cleanup assessment and removal plan. From their description, I am confident that they developing a reasonable plan and timeline. The main issue still to be determined is the extent of the excavation.

I called Natacha Sesko this afternoon and confirmed with her that she is still agreeable to allow all of us to use her property to stage equipment to access the beach. She would like to know a date and time when someone will be on her property next so she can point out some areas she is concerned about. She also says she does not have a key to the gate. The lock was put on the gate by Trip McConkey to protect his property from access through hers. She would like us to put a lock on that gate and give her a key right away. She is fine with bushes and vegetation being cut to make way for the equipment and appreciates that the work done for this action will better stabilize her property. I just emailed the consent for access agreement to her.

I also talked to Trip McConkey this afternoon and he confirmed that we could remove the lock on Natacha Sesko's gate and put a new lock on it. He doesn't think he has a key to the old lock anymore so it need to be cut off. He also is still willing to give us all access through his property as needed. He has a gate on Pennsylvania as well that he will give us the key code to. I just emailed the consent for access agreement to him.
